

EARLYWORD.COM

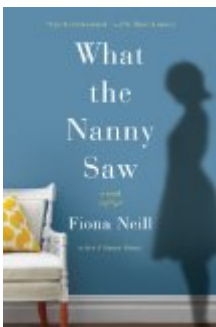

July 27, 2012

WHAT THE NANNY SAW

By Fiona Neill

New Title Radar: July 30 – August 5

Indicating anticipation for two of the titles arriving next week, Megan Abbott's sixth crime novel, Dare Me and M.L. Stedman's debut The Light Between Oceans, have already received strong mainstream reviews. New novels by Margaret Dilloway, Fiona Neill and Jennie Fields also have solid trade reviews behind them. Usual suspects include Dean Koontz, Kay Hooper, Susan Wiggs and YA author Sara Shepard. In nonfiction, Gretchen Rubin is back with a followup to the Happiness Project, historian Ben McIntyre takes a fresh look at D-Day, crime writer Stuart Woods republishes his 1977 sailing memoir, and the Pro Football Hall of Fame weighs in with a celebration of the game for its 50th Anniversary.

What the Nanny Saw by Fiona Neill (Penguin/Riverhead; Tantor Media) is the tale of a London investment banker's unraveling during the 2008 financial crisis, told by the nanny, who holds his family together but has secrets of her own. It's the second novel by British newspaper columnist Neill. LJ says, "this biting drama is filled with tension and remarkably flawed characters. Neill's engrossing tale makes for an addictive read, and one can only keep turning the pages to get to the inescapable conclusion."